General Liability

Business owners, partners, shareholders, contractors and subcontractors all utilize general liability and commercial general liability policies to minimize risk, particularly in today's litigious business environment. Traub Lieberman attorneys stand ready to defend these lawsuits in state and federal courts.

These claims can involve bodily injury, property damage, personal injury, workplace injury, liability resulting from consumption of liquor on premises or at work-related events, fire and theft, misleading or fraudulent advertising, and claims of slander and libel. We excel in defending contractors and subcontractors in bodily injury and property damage construction related claims.

Traub Lieberman attorneys are sensitive to the fact that many of these lawsuits involve coverage under insurance policies. Our litigators will work closely with adjusters and claims specialists to ensure that every insured receives quality legal representation, while working within each carrier's billing and procedural guidelines. Constant communication between attorney, carrier, and insured is an important part of our successful defense team. Traub Lieberman excels at these claims, recognizing the importance of client service both inside and outside the courtroom.
