Nicole Verzillo is a partner in the firm's New York office who fiercely defends her clients, taking a strategic approach during each stage of litigation to help her clients achieve their objectives. She focuses her practice on insurance defense litigation, with particular experience in general liability, premises liability, construction defect, and automobile liability matters. Nicole handles all aspects of litigation in labor law matters, representing property owners, general contractors, and subcontractors. She is also experienced in appellate cases and pursing risk transfer.

Prior to joining the firm, Nicole worked at a Westchester-based firm where she focused her practice on insurance defense litigation. When she is not practicing law, Nicole enjoys playing competitive volleyball.
