Richard J. Rogers

PARTNER

Richard focuses his practice on all aspects of insurance law, including errors and omissions, directors and omissions, and general liability coverage.

A partner in the firm's New York office and a seasoned insurance coverage attorney, Richard Rogers provides his industry clients with skilled, professional representation that facilitates quick and efficient resolutions of their legal problems as well as clear, complete, and concise counsel.

Richard's practice focuses on all aspects of insurance law, including errors and omissions, directors and omissions coverage, and general liability. Through litigation and negotiation, he has successfully dealt with extensive and complex coverage disputes involving contractual and extra-contractual liabilities in a variety of jurisdictions. Richard also provides insurers with advice on coverage issues presented by claims and assists with the effective assertion of their defenses.

As both coverage and monitoring counsel, Richard has extensive experience managing "books" of claims, including large-scale insurance agent, registered representative, and broker/dealer E&O programs. Well-versed in legal trends affecting the insurance and securities industry. Richard also has experience with the defense of tort litigation, including premises liability, employment, and professional liability cases. His malpractice defense work has involved lawyers, accountants, and life insurance agents. Additionally, Richard has drafted many types of professional liability policies and frequently provides insurers with advice on the wording of manuscript insurance contracts.

A graduate of St. John's University, Richard earned his law degree from New York Law School. When not serving his clients, Richard enjoys spending time with his family.
